Vol. XXXIV] No 42—JNO. POLLARD, Editor and Publisher.

NAPANEE, ONT.

BEFORE STOCK-TAKING

Having gone through my stock of

Crockery, China and Glassware

and finding it much too large for this season of the year I have decided to put the whole stock on the market

For the Next 60 Days.

at a large discount, or in other words, sharing up my profits with my customers, and in Dinner and Tea Sets, of which I have a fine assortment, I will give a special discount in order to clear them out to make room for New Goods arriving in the early part of April.

Timothy Seed...

We have secured a supply of the cleanest Seeds from the largest growers in the Counties. We are sure we can recommend this seed.

We carry in stock at all times a full line of our Famous Flour, and the fact that we have an increasing demand for them bespeaks their excellence and popularity. The prices are always right, and the quality too.

We have a full line of grain, all kinds of Cracked Grain, Bran, and Shorts.

When you want Salt for the table, for butter or cheese making, or for salting your pork, remember that the "Windsor" brand is the purest and the best, and while it is the cheapest it is also the saltiest.

Try one of our little Cheese. They weigh about 8lbs. each. A nice size for the family.

Madden's Enamel is the only Stove Pipe
Varnish in the market that does not smell,
smoke or burn off, when applied to hot pipes. It is unequalled for registers, grates, ranges etc. Now is the time to varnish pipes. For sale by all dealers.
Madden's floor paints are in great demand,
and fall painting is the proper thing.

At a special meeting of the town council held in the Council Chamber on Wednesday evening Mr. Rudd Perry was appointed collector for 1895.

Mrs. C. Bruton and Mrs. E. Wagar captured forty-two black bass one day last week.

The best advertisement. Many thousands of unsolicited letters have reached the manufacturers of Scott's Emulsion from those cured through its use, of Consumption and Scrofulous diseases! None can speak so confidently of its merits as those who have tested it.

Albert Beatty, of Tyendinaga, has been committed to the county jail as a dangerous lunatic.

Dr. Youreux, of Wellington, has purchased the practice of the late Dr. Redner, of

There are now 416 convicts in Kingston penitentiary.

Charles Anderson, a Swede, of Belleville,
is said to have deserted his wife and family
and left a good situation when asked to pay his rent. The Belleville papers hint that he has left with another woman.

Geo. Dunlop, of Napanee Mills, while hunting in the Bald Mountains, killed a bald headed eagle of gigantic size. The voracious bird of prey after being shot by a rifle bullet and coming to close quarters
made a desperate struggle for the mastery and existence, tearing Mr. Dunlop's clothes and lacerating his flesh and scalp before giving up the ghost.

It is a fact that many good items are lost
to newspapers every week by the modesty of the people who fail to tell the editor of the things concerning themselves. The right way to do it is to stop him on the street or any place you may happen to meet him and tell him you have been on a visit, have relatives or friends visiting you,
that your wife entertained company—or anything that is in any way a matter of news. We are always on the lookout for news, and would like your help to get it.

We have lost considerable daylight since the days commenced growing shorter, the days were 15 hours long at the beginning of July, they are now but 14. The sun rises after 5 now and each morning remains in bed a full minute longer. He also hastens away from us earlier at night
at the rate of a little more than a minute each day. At the close of August he rose at 5:53 and set at 6:36 and the days were 13 hours and 13 minutes long.
In other words we lost an hour and 13 minutes daylight during the month of August.

The most palatable preparation of Cod Liver Oil in the world is Miller's Emulsion and is now being taken by invalids with astonishing success. Miller's is "the kind that cures" coughs, colds, bronchitis and all throat and lung troubles. Every bottle warranted. No oily taste like others. In big bottles, 50c. and $1.00, at druggists.

A Brockville man put the bloomer

Mrs. Bernard O'Rourke, Deseronto, has been notified by the United States government that she is entitled from August, 1893, to a pension for the rest of her life, of $8 a month. Her husband who died 19 years ago in Belleville, served three years in Battery E, 4th regiment, United States
artillery.

A pleasant event was solemnized at the residence of Mr. Charles Purvis, Bridge street, on the 11th inst. when his daughter, Miss Rilla Maud, was united in wedlock to Mr. Delbert Cassidy, of Yarker. The Rev. Mr. Clarke, of Yarker, officiated.

Mr. Norman P. Macdonald, who defend-

Why Not You? When thousands of people are taking Hood's Sarsaparilla to overcome the weakness and languor which are so common at this season, why are you not doing the same? When you know that Hood's Sarsaparilla has power to cure rheumatism, dyspepsia and all diseases caused by impure blood, why do you continue to suffer? Hood's cures others, why not you?

Tall Corn.

Mr. Ward, father of Dr. Ward, left at this office on Wednesday a stock of Sorg-hum corn, grown by himself, which measures 10 feet 9 inches in length. He also left a fine sample of Chinese corn. He brought the seed from the South when he was there on a visit last winter.

Rheumatism Cured in a Day.—South American Rheumatic Cure, for Rheumatism and Neuralgia, radically cures in 1 to 3 days. Its action upon the system is remarkable and mysterious. It removes at once the cause and the disease immediately disappears. The first dose greatly benefits. 75 cents. Sold by W. S. Dettlor, Druggist.—46v.

Show at Tamworth.

The Addington Electoral District Agricultural Exhibition was held on Sept. 18. This is the first time the exhibition has been held here. There were over one thousand people on the ground yesterday, and over twenty-five hundred to-day. The exhibits were in general up to the average, and in many respects far in advance of former years. Sheep, pigs and horses were the best exhibit in the stock line. A fine display, a good quantity of each, of seventeen varieties of apples from a Sheffield farm orchard attracted much attention.

REV. L. W. SHOWERS

Gives His Experience With Organic Heart Disease—The Dread Malady on the Increase.

For many years my greatest enemy has been organic heart disease. From an uneasiness about the heart, with palpitation more or less severe, it had developed into abnormal action, thumping, fluttering, and choking sensations. Dull pain with a peculiar warm feeling were ever present near the heart. I have tried many physicians and taken numberless remedies with very little benefit. Seeing Dr. Agnew's Cure for the Heart advertised in the Kit-tanning, Pa., papers, I purchased a bottle and began its use, receiving almost instant relief. I have now taken several bottles of the remedy and can speak most highly in its favor. The choking, abnormal beating, thumping and palpitation have almost entirely disappeared. The remedy is certainly a wonder-worker for my case was chronic. Rev L. W. Showers, Elderton, Pa. SOLD BY W. S. DETLOR.

The Same Old Story.

Notwithstanding all the warnings that have been repeatedly given by the newspapers as to the advisability of giving well dressed plausible strangers who hold out tempting and profitable schemes a wide berth, we are every day receiving fresh evidence that the advice is being disregarded. The latest victim to be entrapped is Mr. Wright, a farmer living on the boundary of Tyendinaga and Richmond townships, who was swindled out of about $200 this week by a sharper, who represented himself as a land speculator. On Monday a well dressed, oily tongued stranger called on Mr. Wright. He said he was the possessor of a lot of money that he wanted to invest in land in that vicinity. As Mr. Wright was an old resident and knew everybody in the neighborhood he would be a good man to act as his agent, as he did not want to appear in the matter. Wright, who is an old man, readily fell in with the scheme. The stranger offered to place $1100 in the old man's hands for a certain parcel of land. He wanted Wright to put up a couple of hundred dollars as a guarantee of good faith. This the old man consented to, and the two drove to town on Tuesday and Wright went to the bank and drew out the money. On the Times-Union, Albany, N. Y.—Mr. Charles O. Willard of this city, is the same clever fellow before the footlights that you will find him elsewhere; he has the faculty of pleasing, his gestures are graceful and natural, with a clear and distinct delivery. Press, Troy, N. Y.—Mr. Charles O. Willard received deserved applause; he is clever throughout. Enterprise, Carleton Mo.—Mr. Charles O. Willard is a great favorite, and always pleases; he is very painstaking. His changes were wonderful as "Jack Curtis" in "Stub" where he presents four different characters. Herald, Bristol R. I.—Charles O. Willard sustains his comedy parts in an artistic manner, showing clear conception of the various roles. He is the best comedian that ever appeared before a Bristol audience.

Star, Sikeston, Mo.—Charles O. Willard can play anything from a silly school boy to an old maid; he is exceptionally good as an old dried up judge, and as such a part is all acting to him, it being just the opposite to his nature. Too much praise cannot be afforded him; he is one of the most popular comedians on the American stage.

Antwerp N. Y. Sept 4th.—Without doubt and without flattery the Willard Co., are the cleanest repertoire Co., we have witnessed in four years. They are not only clean as artists, but are gentlemanly and ladylike as well as neat and stylish in appearance. Come again, you will always find the latch hanging on the outside. Willard.

A little son of H. Filson, Stella, fell from a cow's back, breaking and dislocating one of his arms.

A peculiarly sad accident occurred on the farm of Mr. Frank Johnstone, of Sand Hill, Pittsburgh recently. Mr. Johnstone was cutting his corn with the reaper, his little daughter, between three and four years old, was observed coming into the field. The father stopped reaping, and carried her through the gate leading to the field, and sent her to the house. He then resumed his work, and a moment later as he was removing a sheaf from the table of the machine, to the horror he found the child, whom he supposed to be at the house, sitting in the sheaf, with one of her little feet cut off and the other horribly mutilated. The child evidently fearing to come in sight, had crept quietly through the corn and did not even utter a cry when the accident occurred. Drs. Gardner, of Seeley's Bay, and Emery, of Gananoque, were hastily summoned, and did what they could to give relief to the little sufferer, who is now doing as well as could be expected.

Peculiar to itself. Hood's Sarsaparilla is peculiar to itself, in a strictly medicinal sense, in three important particulars, viz: first, in the combination of remedial agents used; second, in the proportion in which they are mixed; third, in the process by which the active curative properties of the preparation are secured. These three important points make Hood's Sarsaparilla peculiar in its medicinal merit, as it accomplishes cures hitherto unknown.

But it is not what we say but what Hood's Sarsaparilla does, that tells the story. What Hood's Sarsaparilla has done for others is reason for confidence that it is the medicine for you.

The wind storm that struck Napanee on the evening of the 11th inst. fortunately for us, spent its force on the city of Kingston. It wrecked houses, uprooted trees and prostrated telegraph poles and created havoc generally in the Limestone city, a conservative estimate placing the damages at fully $80,000.

A. W. Dunkley, one of the senior students at the Napanee collegiate institute, has been notified that he was successful in passing his first year's examination in Queen's university.

COUNT DE DORY

A Well-Known Denmark Nobleman Makes a Statement Which Will Prove of Great Interest and Value to Many. Under date of September 1st, 1894, Count de Dory writes as follows from Neepawa, Man.:—"I have been ailing constantly for six or seven years with severe kidney and bladder trouble. I have doctored during all this time with physicians in different countries without any relief. During my travels I was induced to try South American Kidney Cure, from which remedy I received instant relief. I most heartily endorse this remedy, as I do not think it has an equal." South American Kidney Cure invariably gives relief within six hours after first dose is taken.

PLEASANT VALLEY.

Dear Editor, in your last issue I noticed your former correspondent for Pleasant Valley had gone to the North West. However I will try for once and fill his place as best I know how.

Farmers in this vicinity are about through harvesting, and thrashing is the order of the day.

Mr. and Mrs. John Yorks, of Picton, are visiting friends here.

Mr. and Mrs. John Lochead spent Sunday at Mr. E. Smith's.

Mr. Ceylon Robinson, of Kingston, formerly of this place, paid us a flying visit this week.

Mr. and Mrs. Jethro Card, of Silleville, spent Saturday and Sunday at Mr. Elias Smith's.

Miss Ellie McCall, of Picton, has returned to her aunt's Mrs. M. Pringle's, to spend a few weeks. Wellington laughs all over.

Mr. George Crabbe and wife, of Big Creek, spent Sunday at Mr. S. Dupree's.

We are glad to see Mr. Ryerson Pringle so interested in school matters. We are looking forward for him to be trustee for the coming year.

KINGSFORD.

On Tuesday last, Sept. 10th, a quiet ceremony took place in St. John's church, Selby, when the rector, Rev. Robt. Atkinson united in holy matrimony Mr. Wm. S. Provins, of Deseronto, and Miss S. Jennie Doyle, of Kingsford. Mr. A. W. H. Doyle and Miss Mattie Provins, both of Deseronto, assisted. Miss Doyle is a very estimable young lady, being a great church worker at St. Jude's Kingsford, and a general favorite with all who know her. The bride was very tastefully attired in travelling suit of brown with hat to match. The very many friends of Mr. and Mrs. Provins both in this county and in Deseronto, unite in wishing them long life and prosperity.

Mr. John Hewitt is home after his visit to Deseronto and other places.

Mrs. Wm John Matchett has been renewing acquaintances in this neighborhood, and her bright presence is always welcome. Many proofs were given last week of the popularity of the new bride and bridegroom.

The people of these parts are eagerly looking forward to Mrs. Sargent's coming visit which we understood is about to take place.

Back the noble lady who sought whilst living among us to do good to all without respect to creed or party.

Mrs. Robert Sampson is reported to be in very poor health. Much sympathy is felt both for the estimable lady and also for her worthy partner, both of whom are remembered by the older residents as being popular school teachers. It is well not to forget the early workers in the cause of education.

Divine service is announced to be held in St. Jude's church on Sunday afternoon next at 2.45 p.m.

The Ladies will provide a sumptuous dinner and tea at the Brisco House on Wednesday, for 25 cents. Burch's Big Show.

Our bill boards announce the coming of Geo. Burch's New Sensation which is met with great success in Western Ontario this summer. Space will not permit us to publish the clippings that speak of the features of the show, which will appear in Napanee rain or shine on Wednesday 25th Sept., last day of the county fair, giving two complete performances afternoon at two, evening at eight. Reserve seat tickets can be secured in advance at the ticket wagon.

WOODCOCK.—At South Napanee, on Monday, Sept. 10th, 1894, Beatrice Viola Woodcock, aged 13 years, 6 days, only daughter of J. Woodcock.

way back home they met in with another stranger who the sharper represented as an old friend from Kentucky. The fakir then proposed that as he had to go away for a few days on other business he would put his $1100 in a little tin box, which he produced, and that Mr. Wright would deposit his money there also. He would lock the box and keep the key and Mr. Wright could retain the box containing the money until he returned. This was done, and the strangers departed. After the strangers departure Wright became suspicious and told a friend of the transaction, who advised him to see Mayor Stevens of Napanee and show him the box. Wednesday evening Wright came to Napanee, and on the advice of Mayor Stevens the box was broken into. His worship pried it open with a pair of scissors when instead of the $1300 a couple of pieces of wood and an old newspaper stood revealed. No trace of the fakirs has as yet been discovered.

This is Concentration.—One pill a dose, one box 25 cents. One pill relieves constipation. One box cures an ordinary case. One pill takes weekly neutralizes formation of uric acid in the blood and prevents Bright's disease and Diabetes. True only of Dr. Chase's Kidney Liver Pills.

Hood's Pills are prompt and efficient.

Nearly everyone needs a good tonic at this season. Hood's Sarsaparilla is the one true tonic and blood purifier.

Get the Best. The public are too intelligent to purchase a worthless article a second time, on the contrary they want the best! Physicians are virtually unanimous in saying Scott's Emulsion is the best form of Cod Liver Oil.

CURES CATARRHAL DEAFNESS.

Strong and Unreserved Testimony of the Curative Powers of Dr. Agnew's Catarrhal Powder.

Actions speak louder than words. Mr. John MacInnis of Washabuck Bridge, N. S., made use of Dr. Agnew's Catarrhal Powder and says: "I used the medicine according to directions and found it to be a wonderful cure for catarrhal deafness. I can hear as good as ever. You will find 60 cents enclosed for which please send me another bottle. After recommending the catarrhal cure to my neighbor, she seeing the wonderful good it has done me, wants a bottle, so you will please send a bottle and blower to her also."

One short puff of the breath through the blower, supplied with each bottle of Dr. Agnew's Catarrhal Powder, diffuses this powder over the surface of the nasal passages. Painless and delightful to use. It relieves in ten minutes and permanently cures, catarrhal fever, colds, headache, sore throat, tonsillitis and deafness. 60 cent sample bottle and blower sent on receipt of two three-cent stamps. S. G. Detchoo, 44 Church St. Toronto.

[Mr. D. A. McCabe, of Hay Bay, is, we are informed, somewhat displeased at something THE EXPRESS has said concerning him. We wish Mr. McCabe to be explicit and give us to know just what he complains of, because a careful perusal of our columns of the date of Sept. 6th, does not enlighten us. We certainly have no ill-will to Mr. McCabe, far from it.

The British Government has finally resolved to exclude Canadian cattle on the hoof. The value of the British farmers' cattle has increased £2 or so per head since Canadian cattle were embargoed. The existence of pleuro among Canadian cattle may not be very clearly established, still as we tax British goods as highly as possible the Britishers must be excused for not showing an overweening desire to admit that our cattle are all right.

Although the Hon. Mr. Hart's majority at the last by-election was something over 400 he has been unseated, the trial of the petition coming to a sudden termination Tuesday morning. S. H. Blake, Q. C., counsel for Mr. Hart, while assuring the Judges that there were no personal charges that could be sustained, admitted that other charges which could be proven would vacate the seat. In view of Mr. Hart's overwhelming majority, and the assurance they have that he will again be returned by as large, if not an increased majority, it seems a needless waste of time and money for the Tories of Kingston to protest his election.

HEADS I WIN, TAILS YOU LOSE.

The great international yacht race between the Defender and Valkyrie III ended in a fiasco. It seems that in a contest with the New York yacht club it is a case of "Heads I win, tails you lose." The conditions imposed on a competing yacht are all in favor of the American boat, and what with technicalities, and the friendly aid of American excursion boats, it seems a foregone conclusion that no yacht, be she ever so much superior, can wrest the cup from the New York yacht club, under existing conditions. The first race of the series was won by the Defender, on her merits we are told, although it is significant to note that the Valkyrie lead the way for a considerable distance, and then the excursion boats began to get in their work. They ran across her bow, they got to windward of her, and as one man says: "Of course the boats carrying these people are Americans, while the captains do their best to give those on board the best view possible, they take precious good care to keep out of the way of their own champion no matter how much they may interfere with the foreigner." The Valkyrie was forced to take the backwash of a vast number of excursion steamers, and it is hard to estimate how much her progress was retarded by them.

The second race was won by the Valkyrie, but on a protest from the Defender people, that had the positions been reversed we are confident would never have been made, it was awarded to the Defender. A large number of expert yachtsmen hold that the Defender was responsible for the foul on which she was awarded the race, and the Defender people in accepting a race that they did not win showed that they were by no means confident of victory. The third race the Defender won on her merits, as she went over the course alone, and came in with flying colors. The Valkyrie merely crossed the starting line in the third contest to make a race of it. Lord would charge an excursion rate, and if they did not agree to this they would tear up the proof in their presence, and the valuable originals would never be returned.

Mr. J. S. Hulett was heard in regard to the matter. He said that every drunken bum who got stranded took to going around the town peddling these fakes. They collected fifty cents or so to cover expenses from each person, and the possession of the original photograph gave them a great power in dictating their own terms to the victims of their wiles, as in many instances these originals were valuable for the reason that they could not be replaced. Mr. Hulett wanted these irresponsible agents stopped. Any responsible firm doing a legitimate business would be willing to pay the license, and this would protect the people from frauds, and add considerably to the town's revenue.

A photographer from Kingston who is in town taking views of the town and selling them explained the nature of his business. Some of the councillors were of the opinion that his case did not come under the transient traders by-law and that he could not be made to pay a license. Mr. Batten held differently, however. The gentleman himself said that the discussion had satisfied him that his case did not come under the by-law, and he intended to go on with his work.

Reeve Carson said that the Rathbun Co'y had complained to him that the carters in town were in the habit of carting all trees, etc. that blew down and placing them in the marsh near their property. This endangered the Co'y's property by fire. The chairman of the Street committee promised that he would have a stop put to the practice.

The chairman of the Street committee and Coun. Madole and Coun. Burns had a little tiff. Coun. Madole held that the chairman of the Street committee should not undertake work without the sanction of the council. The chairman held that in many instances that was impracticable.

After considerable discussion and several motions, which were lost, the matter was dropped.

On motion the finance committee was empowered to arrange the sale of land in arrears for taxes, the purchaser to bear all the expenses as per treasures statement, and the expense of survey.

On motion the town clerk, Mr. Jas. Herring was granted a two weeks vacation.

The chairman of the Poor & Sanitary committee brought up a matter that was brought to his notice by the Ladies Aid Societies of the various churches. The family of Jas. Osborne who is now in Manitoba wanted to join their husband, and if the council would grant $8 towards their removal the Ladies Aid would supply the rest. The matter was left in the hands of the Poor and Sanitary committee with power to act.

$25 was placed in the hands of the Poor and Sanitary committee.

The Chief of Police was authorized to have the town pump cleaned as it is badly infected with bull frogs.

Mr. Coxall was heard in reference to the drainage of his property. The matter was referred to the Street committee to report.

TOWN COUNCIL.

(COUNCIL CHAMBER, Sept. 16th 1895.

The council met in regular session, Mayor Stevens presiding, present, Madole, Ward, McAlister, Miller, Carson, Leonard.
The minutes of last regular meeting were read and confirmed.

A petition from Mr. John Herring re the draining of the bank building was referred to the Street committee.

A communication from Mr. E. K. Bowen the market lessee, was referred to the market committee to report.

Mr. McAlister, chairman of the Street committee, reported as to the dangerous condition of the Swing Bridge, and advised that it be replanked. The matter was placed in the hands of the Street committee with power to act.

A discussion then arose as to the advisability of putting down a four foot walk on Centre street. Coun. Madole thought that it would be unfair to put down such a narrow walk on a leading thoroughfare like Centre street. The ratepayers on that street also desired that the walk be placed outside the trees. After considerable cross firing it was decided to put down a four foot walk, and the following motion disposed of the other question at issue.

Moved by Coun. Leonard and Coun. Madole that the walks on Centre Street, from Isabella and Graham, be moved outside the trees. Lost.

Coun. Ward submitted by-law No. 529 to levy the rate of taxation for the year 1895. Coun. Alexander entered.

The by-law placed the rate at 18.4 mills for general purposes, and 8 1/2 for High and Public school purposes. It was read a first second and third time signed, sealed and finally passed.

A by-law to appoint a collector for the year 1895 received its first reading, and the committee rose to report on the second reading of the by-law.

Mr. F. Rutten appeared as the spokesman of a deputation in regard to the transient traders license. He said that the town's by-law covering this was strong enough, and accorded to his interpretation of the statutes covered all transient traders, while the hawkers and peddlers act which was under the jurisdiction of the county covered all petty traders who did not come under the transient traders by-law. He thought if the police would continue to check transient traders as they have been doing it would be all right, but the council was not at liberty to change the by-law as it was in accordance with the statutes, and the town had not the power to legislate in the matter, as that function belonged to the Provincial Government. One of the specific troubles complained of was that fakirs were canvassing the town injuring the business of our local photographer, by undertaking to enlarge pictures for nothing, to advertise their business they alleged. They thus became possessed of valuable original photographs, and when the proof of the picture was submitted they told the purchaser that he must consent to take a

DIMENSIONS OF THE UNIVERSE.

It Takes a Thousand Years for the Light of Some Stars to Reach Us.

While, however, it is interesting to know the distance of some of the stars in miles, when stated in that way the numbers are so large that they frequently convey very indistinct conceptions to the mind. For this reason it is customary to estimate star distances in "light years." A light year is the distance that light, moving at the rate of 186,200 miles per second, travels in one year. This amounts in round numbers to 5,880,000,000,000 miles. The distance of Alpha Centauri is 4.35 light years; that of Sirius, the Dog Star, is almost exactly twice as great, or 8.6 light years. In other words light requires 8.6 years to come to us from Sirius. And there are among the very nearest of the stars, some, whose parallaxes have been rather estimated than measured, appear to be situated at a distance which light could not traverse in less than one or two centuries. The great star Arcturus, for instance, has, according to Dr. Elkin, a parallax of only eighteen one-thousandths of a second. Its distance must in that case be about 181 light years, or more than a thousand million million miles. And if its distance is so great then, since light varies inversely as the square of the distance from its source, it can be shown that Arcturus must actually give forth 5,000 to 6,000 times as much light as the sun yields.

Yet Arcturus is evidently much nearer than the vast majority of the stars are. Not one in a million is known to have a parallax large enough even to be intelligently guessed at. There may be stars whose light requires thousands instead of hundreds of years to cross the space separating them from us.

We thus see that only a few points on the nearer shores of the starry universe lies within reach of our measurements; here and there a jutting headland, while behind stretches the vast expanse over which the hundreds of millions of stars known to exist are scattered.—G. P. Serviss in the Chau-tauan.

Grateful Women Write Us Letters.

From every corner of the country come thankful letters written by those who have been lifted into cheerful, vigorous, healthy strength by Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription.

Thousands on thousands of women have been relieved of the nerve-nagging drag of weakness and pain.

They have been made better wives and better mothers by having perfect health restored, and without the humiliating exposure of examinations so generally insisted on by physicians.

The stereotyped treatment by "local applications" is seldom necessary, and there is no reason why modest, sensitive women need submit to them.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is of purely vegetable composition and is perfectly harmless in any condition of the system. It exerts a wonderful soothing, healing and strengthening power over woman's delicate organism. It is an invigorating tonic for the whole system, and is almost an infallible specific for the peculiar weaknesses, irregularities and painful derangements of woman.

To these causes may be traced the trouble of tired, nervous, irritable, worn-out women. Careless, easy-going doctors frequently treat their women patients for biliousness, nervousness, dyspepsia, liver or kidney troubles, when the real sickness is in the organs distinctly feminine, and no help can come till they are made perfectly strong and healthy in both structure and function which is brought about in due time, by the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription.

JAS. H. DOWNEY,

McRossie's Old Stand, South Side Dundas Street.

M. Daudet has spoken of the silence of London as the first thing that impressed him. With all the swollen traffic of the crowded thoroughfares, and the ceaseless movement of equipages day and night, there is a duller roar than one expects to hear, and it is a deep undertone rather than a confused medley of sounds. But one cannot be long in London without having a consciousness of the vast human energy and activity that are concentrated here. Even in the impressive silence of London he feels the throb of all the world-wide industries and efforts of the race. Statistics are not readily absorbed and interpreted. One hears without emotion or intelligence that the greater London of the Metropolitan Police District has a population of five millions, and that within twenty miles of Charing Cross there are at least seven millions of men, women and children. But when one travels for hours across the town from one swimming-bath of population to another, and sees everywhere the ebb and flow of ceaseless activity, he is appalled by the vastness of London, and thinks of it as a system of worlds, crisscrossed and revolving one about another, and forming something like a human universe. The display of riders and equipages in Hyde Park morning and afternoon are commonly described as the most brilliant spectacle in London. What is even more impressive is the daily movement of life and traffic in the streets. That is the marvel of the modern world.

Unlike the English country, London is not finished. Old as are the traditions and historical associations, it is a new and very recent London that the visitor sees. I am not referring to the architecture and main thoroughfares, but to the transformations of administration and municipal service which have been necessary in order to answer the requirements of a multiplied population. London is now one of the best drained cities in Europe, but forty years ago there were few underground sewers, and drainage ditches emptied pollution directly into the Thames all along its banks. The pavements to-day excite the admiration of every American visitor; and they are not only kept in perfect repair, but they are cleaned every day with thoroughness and painstaking care. But forty years ago there was not a well-paved thoroughfare. Then there was a tangle of narrow

Equal to the Emergency.

Henry A. Wilder, attorney at law, has an eye to business at all times, and under all circumstances. He was sitting in "Cap" Rounds's saloon, No. 525 State street, at 9 o'clock last night when two robbers came in, and while one of them pointed a revolver at Rounds the other emptied the contents of the cash drawer in his hat. The thieves then walked over to where Attorney Wilder was sitting and ordered him to deliver what valuables he had.

Mr. Wilder is the possessor of a fine gold watch, but he did not want to part with it. He told the robbers he was a lawyer, thinking that would soften their hearts towards him, but they were relentless.

"Search him, Jim," said the man who held the gun, "and be quick about it." Jim ran his fingers into Mr. Wilder's vest pocket and found the watch. He was tugging at the chain in an attempt to break it, when Mr. Wilder said:

"Gentlemen, do you appreciate the gravity of the crime which you are committing?"

He then reached into the top pocket of his vest and drew out several of his professional cards. Handing one to the thief who had his watch, he continued:

"Here is my card, and you may want me to defend you if you are arrested for robbing the saloon-keeper, Mr. Rounds. I would be a good witness for the prosecution, but, of course, if I represented you, gentlemen, no power on earth could compel me, as an attorney, to testify against my clients. No lawyer in Chicago would defend a thief who robbed a brother attorney, so you see by robbing me of my watch you are committing a very foolish act. Now, you look to be intelligent gentlemen, and I leave the case in your hands, trusting that your verdict will be for the defendant."

"Take the gentleman's card, Jim, and leave the watch," said the thief who held the revolver at Mr. Wilder's head. "He's all right, and we may need him. If he could make that 'spiel' to a jury we'd be acquitted."

As the robbers backed out of the saloon, Mr. Wilder shouted after them: "My retainer is usually $25."

Didn't Pray Against the Barometer.

On one of his European tours a Pittsburgh gentleman happened to reach the famous Tyrol country, during a disastrous drought. The prospects of the farmers were most discouraging, indeed, and their complaints were daily becoming louder and deeper.

A politic priest in charge of a country parish had taken advantage of this condition of affairs to impress upon his people that this was probably a chastisement for their sins. At first they were somewhat skeptical and defiant, but as the effects of the drought upon their crops became more apparent they grew more and more penitent and finally supplicated the holy father to intercede in their behalf with the powers that controlled the dews and rains.

Having a reliable barometer in his study, he told them he would do what he could for them. At last he directed them to pray for rain, and he would do likewise. They did so, and their prayers were answered by copious showers.

"Do you really believe in praying for rain?" said the traveler to the priest. "Most assuredly," he replied, "but not against a rising barometer."—Pittsburgh Commercial Gazette.

She Was Worried.

It was the night before the wedding and he was bidding her good night, and softly whispered: "To-morrow eve, darling, we begin our journey as bride and bridegroom, pilgrims of life together; hand in hand we will journey adown life's rugged road. We shall want to set out with a glorious equipment of faith, and hope, and courage, that neither of us may faint and fall by the wayside before the journey is ended; will we not, darling?"

"I—I—oh, yes, to be sure; only I really am so worried about the train of my dress. It didn't hang one bit nice to-day when I tried the dress on, and I'd die with mortification if it hung so at the wedding to-morrow. Go on with what you were saying, dear!"—Philadelphia Times.

The little girls of Boston are reported to be overeducated. The story goes that a child was asked in a street car her age, with a view to half-fare for children, whereupon the premature little damsel murmured, "If you don't object, conductor, I'll prefer to pay full fare and keep my own statistics."—Hudson Register.

single generation $100,000,000 has been expended in the opening of new thoroughfares, many of which have been put through business sections. The sanitary and police arrangements, and the educational system, have been revolutionized during the same period. Within the last ten years disused cemeteries have been converted into public breathing places; and the park area has been more than doubled. All the rapid transit facilities, incomplete as they are, are of recent introduction. Indeed, the strangest anomaly about the city that impresses an American visitor is its essentially modern and progressive character. He comes up to London, expecting to revel in glimpses of antiquity and he finds himself at once preoccupied with practical evidences of the modern art of municipal government and enlightened progress in solving the complex problem of ministering to the comfort and necessities of an immense urban population.

The spires of Greater London number nearly a thousand. Seldom is a visitor far removed from at least one of them, and he cannot remain here long without acknowledging the potency of the influence exerted by the churches. One of my many surprises in London was a casual visit to Old Bow Church at noon on a week day, when I expected to find it empty; but there was a crowded congregation listening to a practical sermon from an eloquent preacher and joined in a hearty hymn. Outside was the whirl and rumble of London at its busiest hour, and in one of the noisiest centres, but within was an old-fashioned evangelical service conducted with fervor. I have yet to enter an English church on Sunday that was not thronged with worshippers; nor have I ever seen a great city that was more orderly and quiet on Sundays than this great, progressive, conservative London.

Trees.

No tree has yet been measured taller than the great eucalypt us in Gippsland, Australia.

In Buena Vista, Ohio, an apple tree is reported bearing at the same time half-grown apples, buds and blossoms.

The Tea Party tree in Bowthorpe Park, Lincolnshire, England, has a hollow big enough to place a table with seats for several guests.

The region between the Nile and the Red Sea was once clothed in forest. So were the Scotch Highlands.

The oldest chestnut may be that at Torworth, England. It is fifty feet in circumference, but the trunk is very short. So long ago as 1135 it was a landmark and signal, as appears upon records.

In the West of Ireland was an enormous forest until the sixteenth century. After the Geraldine rising in 1534, this great forest was all cut away by English settlers as a means of depriving the Irish of their last hiding place and refuge.

Fighting Consumption.

Consumption or tuberculosis has been the subject of early and more vigorous efforts to check its transmission into Prussia than elsewhere, as is natural, considering that Dr. Koch is a Berlin professor. The result is that while from 1875 to 1887, before his discovery, the deaths from tubercle or consumption, were 31 in 10,000; since 1887 there has been a gradual decrease to 25 in 10,000. Elsewhere this decrease has not taken place. Prussian prisons and insane asylums show a reduction in their death rate from tuberculosis, since careful precautions were adopted. The death rate from this cause among religious nursing orders was in 1881-2 114 per 10,000. In 1893-4 it had dropped to 67, almost half. Facts like these show the absolute necessity of careful precautions for destroying the sputa of consumptive patients. Rigid care in this direction would greatly decrease a disease to which a large proportion of deaths are due.—Philadelphia Press.

The child that cannot digest milk can digest Cod-liver Oil as it is prepared in Scott's Emulsion. Careful scientific tests have proven it to be more easily digested than milk, butter, or any other fat. ### CHAPTER VIII.

Lady Florence crossed the room, and stood upon the dais. Her maid removed her ladyship's long, loose ulster and hat, and revealed her mistress in all the splendor of evening dress. The light fell upon a shimmer of satin, the glitter of diamonds, the soft glow of pearls, upon a vision of regal loveliness, calculated to dazzle the eyes of any man.

Senley Tyers exchanged the canvass of the easel and spread some color on his palette, keeping his eyes away from her, as if he could scarcely trust himself to look; and when he laid the palette aside and advanced to put her in the proper pose, he still kept his eyes down.

Lady Florence was being painted half sitting, half reclining on a couch, her fan drooping in her right hand, her left supporting her head. She sank on to the couch with an indifferent, careless air, but at once assumed so graceful an attitude that Senley Tyers had very little to do in the way of arranging. A few touches to the folds of the magnificent dress, and the pose was complete. In giving these touches his hand trembled, but Lady Florence did not notice the fact.

He was to her just a painter; nothing more. Vane Tempest, desirous of doing his friend a service, had asked her to let Senley Tyers paint her portrait for the next Academy, and she had consented, as she would have done if Vane had asked her to allow an artist of the pavement to draw her portrait in colored chalks.

Even the dress was Vane's choice. He had happened to remark: "You'd better let him do you in all your war-paint; it will create a sensation at the Academy next season, and be a splendid advertisement for my friend. He is first-rate at silks and satins, and diamonds, and all that; at least, so I am told. I don't know much about it my-after a pause, during which he had allowed her voice, clear, bell-like yet low, to sing in his ears. "It is hard work, painting some faces; while others—well, they paint themselves."

"Yes?" she said, indifferently. Her indifference galled him, and he lowered his brush slightly.

"You do not ask if yours is among the latter, Lady Florence," he said, with a faint smile, and a hesitating glance at her.

He did not know how she would take even this respectful approach to the familiar.

"No," she said, not so much with hauteur, as with cool, ice-like impassivity. "It is a question for you, who have to produce the portrait, not for me."

Her half-contemptuous response fell on his like a dash of cold water for a moment; then a fierce anger at her immovability rose within him.

"You are not anxious, then, that the portrait should be a success, Lady Florence?"

She shrugged her shoulders and stroked the cat.

"I am afraid I do not care much about it," she said, with the same indifference.

"And yet most ladies are so very anxious," he said.

"Yes. Her Grace of Mudshire, who has just left, I think she would shed tears if her portrait were not what she expected and hoped it to be."

He went to the duchess' portrait and held it up, a smile, almost a sneer, on his dark, pale face.

Lady Florence looked at the portrait and smiled.

"The duchess should be satisfied, I think," she said.

He set the canvas in its place against the wall.

"And you, Lady Florence?" he asked, standing before the easel. "Will you not see how the picture is progressing and give me your opinion?"

haughty beauty. Was there no way of rousing her? He felt at that moment as if he would have given half of what remained of his life to see that cold, impassive, lovely face flushed with passion—with passion of love or anger, or, yes, of hate. Its marble-like impassivity tortured him.

To feel that her very presence set his heart aching, and to know that he was less than nothing to her, that no word of his could move her was an agony which throbbled through him like a subtle poison.

He painted on for about a quarter of an hour, then he said:

"We will rest for a little while, Lady Florence, if you please."

She inclined her head, and stroked the cat, which had again coiled itself up on her lap.

"Very well," she said; "painting must be tiring work."

He sauntered to the cabinet and brought out an exquisite Venetian flask and glass, and set them on the inlaid moresque table beside the couch.

"Will you let me offer you a glass of Persian wine, Lady Florence?"

She scarcely raised her head.

"No, thanks."

He bowed, and went to the cabinet and poured himself out a glass of the tincture which he has taken just before she had come in, and his eyes began to brighten, and his hand went out toward his cigarette-case; but he remembered who was present, and did not venture to smoke.

He wandered aimlessly about the room, and picked up one of two of the canvases and looked at them absently. The last he caught up was a sketch of Vane Tempest.

He carried it to the light, and stood looking at it with his back to Lady Florence.

It was not a bad sketch and not a good one. He was about to set it down again, when he heard Lady Florence's voice behind him say:

"Mr. Tyers—"

There was so novel a tone in it that he turned round quickly, the sketch in his hand. She was leaning on her elbow, her eyes fixed on the sketch, a faint dash of color in her face. As her eyes met his they faltered, and—yes, dropped.

He stood looking at her in a dull kind of a maze. The lovely face had awakened to life at last; the soul had become visible in the eyes.

For a second, thinking only of his picture, a feeling of delight and gratification sprang up within his heart; then he glanced at the sketch, and the delight changed to the hideous agony of jealousy. It was the sight of Vane Tempest's face that, had roused her borne putting on evening dress in the daytime, but if you think the picture

will be any the better for it, well—
and she had slightly shrugged her shoulders, surprised that Vane should take so much interest in "the painter,"
and should call him "my friend."

This was her fourth sitting, but it would scarcely be saying too much to assert that she had not exchanged a dozen sentences with Senley Tyers—had scarcely looked at him, in fact, and that if she had met him in the street, would hardly have recognized him.

If any one had told her that this man knew the sound of her footsteps—that his presence so affected him that he was obliged to have recourse to a strong drug to "pull himself together," and enable him to retain his composure—
she would not have believed her informant, and would have laughed—no, smiled; for Lady Florence rarely laughed—the idea to scorn.

Senley Tyers, the artist—a kind of superior photographer—dare to think of her in any other way than a servant
thinks of his mistress! Well, Lady Florence would not have credited it—or,
believing it, would have set the man
down as mad.

She was the only daughter of the Earl of Warlock, the peer who, when once asked what he did with his immense wealth, replied, with calm hauteur, "Sir,
I roll in it." She would inherit lands, houses, mines, money from him; but
she already possessed a large fortune derived from her mother, who had been a famous heiress.

With her exquisite loveliness, and her
vast riches present and prospective, Lady Florence Heathcote was an object in the matrimonial market which many a man had longed to secure. There was no nobleman in the empire, barring one of the royal blood, who would not have considered himself honored by Lady Florence's hand; and if she had so pleased, she might have been a duchess or a marchioness long before this. But Lady Florence had refused a ducal coronet and a share in the most famous marquise in the kingdom. Some of her friends declared that, like the goddess Diana, she was too proud to wed with any man; others whispered that if a certain Vane Tempest would but ask her to be his wife, her pride would vanish and the goddess melt in the human, notwithstanding that Vane Tempest was a penniless "detritment,"
and no match for the celebrated beauty
and heiress.

She lay back on the couch, and languidly, indifferently, looked round the room. She did not glance at the picture on the easel, or attempt to recall the artist, as the Duchess of Marlborough did. She was there to be painted, and whether the artist did it ill or well mattered nothing to her.

Tiger, the cat sat up and looked at her
for a moment speculatively, then rose,
stretched itself, and sprang on her lap.

Lady Florence stroked it with her fan,
and the animal coiled itself and purred.
Senley Tyers, upon whom no movement of Lady Florence was lost, said:
"You are fond of cats, Lady Florence?"

She raised her head, as if made aware of his existence.

"Not particularly," she said; "this is a very handsome one."

"Yes," he said; "it is a thorough-bred Persian, and very much attached to me."

Lady Florence's face said, as plainly
as a face could say, that the information had no interest whatever for her.

Senley Tyers took up his brush and commenced to paint.

No man ever had a lovelier subject,
and he worked with that enthusiasm which is only evoked by sheer love of the work. Every now and then he had to glance at her, and the beauty of her face and form began to exercise a peculiar influence over him. It was like some potent spirit that mounted to his brain and set his heart beating fiercely.

He felt that he must speak—he must break the spell, or throw down his brush and fall at her feet.

"I hope I am not tiring you, Lady Florence," he said; and in his own ears
his voice sounded thick and strained.

She raised her head, and seemed to wake from a deep reverie.

"Oh, no," she said, listlessly; "yours is the tiring part of the business, not mine. I should think you must be weary of painting portraits."

"Of some, yes; of others, no," he said,

toward the picture, looked at it with an indifferent eye, and said listlessly:

"Have you flattered me as you have flattered the duchess, Mr. Tyers?"

"No," he said, almost under his breath—her nearness confused and embarrassed him—"no; that were impossible. My difficulty is in painting truthfully."

She looked at him with cold inquiry.
He pointed to the face on the canvas
and continued, his voice very low and hushed:

"If you look at the mirror, and then at the face I have painted, you will understand what I mean, Lady Florence. The great master of flesh tints was Etty. You may know that?"

She moved her head slightly in the negative.

"I have heard of him, seen his pictures. I didn't know. I know nothing about art."

"Well, Etty himself would have found it impossible to imitate the delicate tints, the creamy white of the face you see in the mirror. The hair again. Yours has a red gold on it which would have driven even the old Flemish masters to despair. I have tried to suggest—to suggest it only—in my picture, and you see how dull the paint is compared with the original."

She glanced from the mirror to the canvas, critically, calmly, as if they were discussing some other face than her own.

"Then the eyes," he went on. "There are one or two men who can paint eyes,
or, rather, the public think they can;
but there is not one of them could reproduce the violet shade in yours.
Shade! There are a dozen—twenty shades. Sometimes while I am painting them they will change from blue almost to black; and let them be what color they may, they are so beautiful
that they fill me with discouragement
and despair."

She looked and listened without a blush, without a falter in eyes or in her lips. She was just as unmoved as if he had been the dressmaker dilating
on the exquisite perfection of her figure.

"I see you do not confine your flattery
to your brush, Mr. Tyers," she said, coldly, indifferently; "but, really I don't see why you should be disappointed.
If I am as good-looking as that"—she pointed to the portrait with her fan—"I am quite satisfied."

"And I am not," he said, with subdued warmth. "It is a libel—a caricature! Sometimes I have been on the point of slashing the canvas with my palette-knife, and telling you that I had attempted an impossible task and must relinquish it."

"Pray do so, if you feel in that way
about it."

"Perhaps I can show you what I mean—what I miss, where I fail," he said, after a moment's pause. "Do you see the dress, the diamonds, the fan—all that has no life in it? Well, they are painted well enough. Although I say it, I am, if not satisfied with them
—for no artist is ever satisfied—at least tolerant of them. I can let them pass.
But it is when I come to the face that I find my difficulty. It is as lifeless as the satin and silk; it is just a beautiful mask without a soul, or the breath
of life, or thought—"

He stopped and sighed, and looked at her.

"Perhaps that is my fault," she said,
going back to the couch and sinking down again. "But please don't be uneasy, Mr. Tyers. I am quite satisfied with my picture, and I am sure my friends will be. Though you may not think so, you have flattered me quite enough."

"Ah, no, no!" he said; "I know that it is not so. I have not stood before it and studied it for hours without learning the truth. I thank you for your patience, Lady Florence—for your kind encouragement."

He took up his brush and went to work again with seeming composure;
but inwardly he was burning. There was not another woman in the world,
he told himself, who could have stood by unmoved and heard herself spoken of, described, as he had described this life and feeling, "whose portrait is that?"

"This?" he said, slowly. "This is a rough sketch of Mr. Vane Tempest."

"I thought so," she said, sinking back,
and speaking with what he felt sure
was only a simulation of her usual cold listlessness. "Will you let me see it please?"

He crossed the room and held it in a proper light before her, and his eyes watched hers as they dwelt on it. He saw—his passion—call it love for her,
if you will—gave him a keen and piercing insight—her lovely violet eyes soften. Grow darker, though she tried to keep their expression one of cold criticism.

"Yes," she said, "this is Mr. Vane Tempest; but it is not a good portrait."

"No," he assented; "it lacks expression. I have missed that careless, light-hearted look that is in his eyes and about his lips. It is only a rough sketch;
I made it one night while he was walking up and down—he is rarely still—smoking. It is worth nothing. They say that it is always difficult for a painter to paint any one whom he loves; perhaps that is why I have missed Vane Tempest's bright look."

"You and he are great friends?" she said; and the same interest displayed itself in her voice.

"Why, yes," he said, "I suppose we are great friends; at any rate, there is great friendship on my side. You do not know, Lady Florence, that Vane Tempest saved my life? He may have told you—"

She smiled rather scornfully.

"He certainly would not have told
any one," she said.

Senley Tyers bit his lip.

"No; of course not. No; but it is the fact. Vane Tempest found me starving
—on the verge of suicide. He saved me.
Not by giving me food and money only
—that would not have done it—but by cheering and encouraging me."

"That is like him," she said, softly.

He walked to the easel quickly and softly, and caught up the brush and painted quickly, as he continued talking.

"Most men would have been satisfied in playing the Good Samaritan, and have said 'God-bye'; but Vane Tempest gave me his friendship as well as his food and money. It is to him that I owe the success that has come to me. Yes, we are friends. He comes here when he pleases, and spends what are for me
some happy hours. I think there is no one in the world like him—"

He glanced at her. A pensive smile, sad and tender, was in her eyes, and he painted it into the eyes on the canvas.

"So bright and light-hearted, and yet so true and brave!" The violet eyes seemed to glow.

"And he is always the same," he went on. "You know—or perhaps you do not know—that he and I have been down to the west coast together?"

"No," she said. "When?—where?"

"Last week," he said; "to a place called Trelorne. He asked me to go down with him, for company's sake. I left him there. It is a wild spot, and I was quite sorry to leave him."

She leaned forward, leaning on her elbow, her eyes fixed on the sketch
where it rested against the wall.

"Why did he go there?" she asked.

"He went to see a relation, an uncle—"

"Ah! I know," she murmured. "Why

The Reason Why the Heart Flutters, Palpitates, is Oppressed, and How to Relieve it.

The heart has a hard old time of it and within itself does not excite much disease, but it is very often called upon to display the troubling symptoms of palpitation, fluttering, labored breathing, oppression, etc., on account of diseased Kidneys offering increased resistance to the passage of the blood through their defective secretory structures, causing a morbid change in the blood unsuited to nourish the tissues and noxious to them. The minute arteries resist the passage of this foul blood, resulting in the muscular walls of the arteries and the ventricle of the heart becoming partially paralyzed, and from this cause results much of the so-called heart disease, which is owing to wasting Kidneys not being able to perform their functions. In order to relieve heart trouble remove the cause in the Kidneys with Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. They relieve the blood of poisonous deposits, it goes on its way a stream of health, relieving the heart and imparting strength to every tissue of the body. did you not stay with him? It will be lonely, and dull."

She might have been speaking to Vane's valet. Senley Tyers set his teeth hard; then he forced a smile.

"Oh! he didn't want me. He could not have taken me where he was going. I am rather surprised that I have not heard from him before this. I don't suppose there was any danger."

She raised herself, and the fan dropped from her hand.

"Danger? What do you mean?" she said; and the anxiety pierced through the disguise of her cold voice.

Senley Tyers crossed the room and picked up the fan, and was about to offer it to her; then he remembered her refusal to take the handkerchief from him, and with a sudden flush laid the fan on the table.

She stretched out her hand and took it, her eyes meeting his in haughty questioning.

"What do you mean by danger?" she asked.

He raised his brows. "I scarcely know. He had to ride along the coast some distance, and the people who lent him the horse were full of warnings and forebodings."

She seemed actually to rise; then sank back and smiled.

"I think Mr. Tempest quite capable of taking care of himself," she said.

"Oh, yes!"—he laughed softly—"quite capable and strong enough. Still, I am rather surprised he has not written a line. When he comes back, I will do another sketch of him. This, as you say, is really bad."

He took it up and raised his palette-knife to dash it across the face, his eyes watching her sideways.

She sprang from the couch and caught his arm ere the knife could fall.

Her face was pale, her eyes flashing, her breath coming fast.

The two looked into each other's eyes in silence for an instant; then she said, with a catch in her voice, proudly, haughtily:

"Do not destroy it, please. I—I will buy it!"

His face was as pale as hers, but sorrow, and sinister smile played over it as he flung the knife on the small table beside the easel.

"I will make you a present of it, if you will accept it, Lady Florence," he said. "Stay," as she inclined her head and was about to sweep back to the couch. "Do not move!" He turned quickly, and caught up his brush and painted. She watched him as he worked with haughty displeasure and impatience, then a look of wonder and interest began to dawn in her eyes.

He was transforming the face on the canvas; it had been a dead, soulless mask, it was now becoming, under his rapid and skillful hand, the face of a woman, alive and breathing love!

He turned to her with a smile of triumph, that still had something sinister in it.

"You see," he said, "there is life and soul there now! You have given me what I wanted! And"—he paused and different avenue of oak.

As he opened the gate and rode up the avenue he was somewhat surprised to see that the drive was well kept, that the shrubs lining it were choice ones, and like the trees, evidently well-cared for; but his surprise was intensified as, at sudden bend of the road, he came in sight of what without exaggeration may be called a stately mansion.

It had a long facade pierced by arched windows opening on the ground floor on to a stone terrace, with wide steps leading to velvet lawns studded here and there with beds glowing with autumn flowers.

It was so stately, so grand a place that Vane pulled up hesitatingly. He had expected to see—well, a fairly good building of the farm-house type, with a garden roughly kept and in harmony with the wild scenery and inhabitants of the district.

This long, stretching pile, glowing whitely in the sunlight, "gave him pause," as Hamlet says.

"I suppose I've lost my way again," he said to himself; and he looked round for some one to whom he could make inquiries.

He saw no one for a minute or two but presently a small, bent old man dressed in fustian, and carrying a pruning-hook in one hand and a bunch of twigs in the other, came from among the trees and set to work on the hedge.

Vane rode up to him, and called him in his usual-free-and-easy style.

"Hi! Is this Vale Hall?"

The old man turned his head without straightening his back, and looked up at him with a pair of keen, piercing eyes, which had in them, notwithstanding their keenness, that peculiar expression that grows into and sets hard in the eyes of the man who lives far from the maddening crowd. Every laborer one meets on a country road has it.

The old man looked at the stalwart figure and handsome face half vacantly for a moment, as if he doubted the evidence of his eyes; then he said quietly:

"What?"

Vane repeated the question.

"Yes; this is Vale Hall," said the old man; and swung his hook again, as if the question and questioner were done with and had quite ceased to interest him.

"Thanks," said Vane. "Can you tell me if Mr. Vale is at home?"

The old fellow stopped his work and eyed him again.

"The squire's at home," he said, succinctly.

Vane laughed his light-hearted laugh. "I beg pardon. I ought to have said 'the squire,'" he said. "Whereabouts are the stables, my man?"

"Back of the house," was the reply; and the hook went to work vigorously again.

"Look here," said Vane; "perhaps you'll come and show me the way and take my horse, will you?" and he rode up closer and held out a half crown.

The old man took it.

"Thank you; I'll show ye," he said; and he walked beside the horse, with his hook crossed in true laborer fashion over his arm.

"After all," said Vane, "I don't know why I should trouble you. I expect I should find a groom there."

"Ay, like enough," said the man; "but you've paid me, and I'll come."

"Right," said Vane, cheerily; "I'm glad the squire is at home, for I've come all the way from London to see him. And nearly broken my neck on the journey," he had almost added.

The old man nodded, but did not appear to feel any particular interest in the statement.

"What a beautiful place you have here!" Vane went on. "I suppose you have lived here a long time?"

"Ay," was the reply; "a good many years, young sir."

"Come," thought Vane, "this uncle of mine keeps his servants a long time; he can't be altogether a bad fellow."

The old man led him past the front of the house, Vane checked the horse to look and admire.

"Splendid!" he said, as he reached the stables.

A groom came forward, but the old man led the horse into a stall and halted it, as if desirous of earning the half crown; and Vane, wiping his forehead and flicking the dust from his clothes with his whip, said:

"Don't give him any water till he's cool, please. Give him a rub-down first."

On he said, "Are you are again."

The old man nodded, and shuffled across the room and arranged the logs on the fire.

Vane watched him curiously.

"I am waiting to see Mr. Vale," he said.

"What do you want with him?" asked the old man, with a keen glance. Vane laughed shortly.

"Well," he said, "perhaps I had better wait and tell that to himself."

The old man sank into a chair, and pointed to one behind Vane.

"Sit down," he said. "I am Reuben Vale."

Britisher—Are your humorists here in America generally rude?

Dillon—Well, no; those I have met have been most internally blue.—Toledo Blade.

Mrs. Johnson—Bress my soul, chile, Whaffo' yo' rubbin' dat stove-blackin' on your face?

Little Dinah—Dat's fo' my complexion, mommer.

Mrs. Gossipy—You are quite a young man to have gained the title of Colonel.

Col. Bourbon—I inherited it, madame, along with my honored father's estates in Kentucky.

Young Wife—When my husband gets cross I always threaten to go home to my mother.

Old Wife—Mercy, child! how simple you are! You should threaten to have your mother come to you.

Mrs. S.—Why don't you go to work? Tramp—Please, mum, I made a solemn vow twenty years ago that I'd never do another stroke of work till women was paid th' same wages as men. (Gets a trifle.)—Beatrice Democrat.

"Miranda," said the new woman to her junior companion, "I am afraid you are forgetting yourself."

"Why?" was the startled inquiry. "You did not remove your bonnet when you rode up in the elevator with that young man."

the page that was burning within him—"and you have given me your secret!"

She recoiled instinctively, as one recoils from the uplifted head, the forked tongue of a snake.

"My secret?" she panted, haughtily, yet with an undertone of vague dread. "Yes," he said. He pointed to the sketch which she still held, which unconsciously she pressed to her heart. "Yes, I give you that portrait, Lady Florence; what will you say if I give you the original—the man himself?"

The scarlet rushed to her face, her eyes blazed; then they fell beneath his half-mocking, half-imperious gaze.

"I do not understand you," she faltered, almost inaudibly.

"I think you do," he said, slowly. "Hush! your maid is listening. Come to me for a sitting to-morrow, and I will show you that I make no idle boast when I say that I can gratify the one, the dearest wish of your heart."

She tried to laugh, to beat him down—this low-born, presumptuous adventurer—with the scorn which flowed so readily from her eyes, her lips; but she could not. His eyes, his dark saw-like face, seemed to hold her in thrall.

For the first time since her acquaintance, they had changed places. It was she who, metaphorically, was at his feet, instead of he at hers.

She drew a long breath, opened her lips, as if about to declare that she would not come again; then she turned away in silence.

A smile of triumph curled Senley Tyers' thin lips. He took up her cloak and her fan, and approached her. "Permit me," he said.

Yesterday, an hour ago, she would have drawn back with a surprised stare at his venturing to touch her garments, excepting to arrange them for her pose. Even now she shrank a little and lifted her superb eyes; eventually she submitted—she who a week ago had refused to take a handkerchief from his hand.

CHAPTER IX.

Vane rode on in a state of mind difficult to describe. It was so hard to believe that all that had happened during the last few days had really happened and had not been dreamed.

One thing, however, impressed the reality of the incidents upon him, and that was the remembrance of Nora's kiss. The touch of the soft, warm lip clung to his as he rode along, and aroused a feeling within him which haunted him mile by mile.

He could not get her out of his head—the pure, oval face, the dark-grey eyes, the thick tresses of soft, silky black; the very tones of her voice rang in his ears.

The strangeness of the elder woman, the discovery that they were smugglers, the attack of the revenue men, all faded to insignificance in his mind beside the remembrance of that girlish face as it had been held up to his with glowing eyes and quivering lips.

"Poor little Nora," he muttered. "What an existence, what a fate! Can't read or write, and shut up with a smuggling aunt. She's worthy of a better life than that. And she tried to break my neck. But she made up for it afterward. If I'd been killed outright, I should have had to forgive her."

He put his hand under his waistcoat and smiled—a half-tender, half-pitying smile—to feel if the shilling was still there. It was there all right, and, somehow, the feel of the coin was pleasant to him.

"I wonder if something couldn't be done for her?" he asked himself, wistfully. "She'll fall off those conformed cliffs, or come to grief with that smuggling business, as sure as fate. I wish I could do something—get her away, into a kind of Home of some kind."

But even as he formulated the wish in his mind, he felt how hopeless and futile it was. He had promised to say nothing of the existence of the two women; and even if he had not given such a promise, he felt that Nora was the sort of girl who would go mad or die if she were shut up in a Home of any sort.

But for miles he thought of her, recalled her, dwelt upon her, as assuredly he had never yet dwelt upon the remembrance of any other woman. But then he did not regard Nora Trevanion as a "woman"; she was just a half-wild child-girl to him, no more.

He rode fast and had no difficulty in finding the road, and presently he saw coat as Vane turned away and retraced his steps to the front again. He went slowly up the steps, and paused to look at the view. No better position for a house could have been chosen: wide-stretching lawns, a fringe of park, the hill-broken plain beyond—all lay before Vane's surprised and admiring eyes.

The hall door was open; and he stepped in. It was a large hall, built, as Vane noticed with amazement, of Spanish mahogany. Broad stairs of the same wood led to the corridor—also composed of the same costly timber—which ran round three sides of the hall. A great window of stained glass occupied nearly a third of the back wall, and pictures and flags and men in armor were ranged on the other three.

A tremendous fire burned in a wide grate with dog-irons, and a huge deer-hound, which had been lying before the blaze, came forward, growling, to meet the intruder. Vane stretched out his hand and patted him, and the hound, after an investigating sniff, thrust his nose into Vane's hand, and accepted the overture of friendship.

While he was talking to and patting the dog, a servant in plain black livery came from behind the curtains that draped the wide door under the gallery.

"Can I see Mr. Vale?" asked Vane, and he took out a card. The man took it, but looked doubtful. "I don't know, sir. I will see. Will you please take a seat?"

Vane dropped into a chair beside the fire, and presently the man came back. "Please follow me sir," he said. He crossed the hall and ushered Vane into a library. If he had not been prepared by the space and luxury of the hall, Vane would have been astonished by the elegance and subdued richness of the room and its appointments. The book-cases and furniture were of teak and ebony, though Vane did not know it; the hangings were of old Amiens velvet; there were Wedgwood plaques in the panels that would have made a connoisseur's mouth water.

While he was looking round him with wonder and some amusement at the contrast between the reality of Vale Hall and his preconceived idea of it, the door opened and the old woodman entered. Vane nodded.

Nervous Prostration

It is now a well established fact in medical science that nervousness is due to impure blood. Therefore the true way to cure nervousness is by purifying and enriching the blood. This great blood purifier is Hood's Sarsaparilla. Read this letter:

"For the last two years I have been a great sufferer with nervous prostration and palpitation of the heart. I was weak in my limbs and had smothered sensations. At last my physician advised me to try Hood's Sarsaparilla which I did, and I am happy to say that I am now strong and well. I am still using Hood's Sarsaparilla and would not be without it. I recommend it to all who are suffering with nervous prostration and palpitation of the heart." MRS. DALTON, 66 Alice St., Toronto, Ontario. Get Hood's, because

Death of Orlin Herring.

Mr. Orlin Herring died in the Kingston hospital on Monday. He had been in the hospital for several weeks undergoing treatment for paralysis. Deceased was a brother of Mr. John Herring, and about 70 years of age. The remains were brought to Napanee on Tuesday and the funeral took place to the Napanee cemetery on the same day.

Will be at the Paisley House.

A thing of beauty is a joy forever. So it is with the new styles Prof. Dorenwend sells to ornament the head. This fall he has many new styles added. A few, mentioned here, meet with such a demand by the ladies that the firm had to put in double its plant in order to fill their orders. The Bellena Bang front, made of natural curl wavy hair and natural parting takes the lead. The Pompadour style, the Irene bang, the Victoria Coll for back set are all selling fast. Prof. Dorenwend will be at the Paisley House on Tuesday, October 1st. This will be his only visit to Napanee this year, so take the opportunity offered. 42 b

Appointed Principal.

The following taken from the Hamilton Herald refers to an old Napanee High School boy and will be read with interest: L. T. Loocheed, M.A., who has been assistant in English and modern languages in Hamilton Collegiate Institute, has tendered his resignation, having accepted an appointment as principal of Caledonia High School. Mr. Loocheed is a graduate of Queen's University, and took a post-graduate course at Toronto, where he obtained his M.A. He is in his seventh year as a member of the Collegiate Institute staff. At Caledonia Mr. Loocheed will have under him two Toronto graduates, one a specialist in mathematics and the other a specialist in classics. He will take charge on Sept. 30th.

Barney King Killed.

A dispatch from Sturgis, Mich., on Tuesday says: "Trainmen on the Grand Rapids and Indiana railway, while coupling a freight train here early Tuesday morning, found the body of a man under a car. No one knows how it came to be there. The remains were later identified by means of papers found on the dead man's person as being those of Barney King, a resident of Napanee, Ont." Barney was addicted to drink, but otherwise was a harmless enough person. He was a good tailor, but owing to intemperate habits could not hold a job for any length of time. He worked for McAlister & Co at various times, and while he kept sober was a model workman. Although he figured somewhat prominently as the principal in the McLeod murder trial, it was pretty clearly established that he was perfectly innocent in the matter. He had a somewhat checkered career, and his tragic ending was a fitting climax to a mispent life.

Wedding Bells.

We clip the following from the Lindsay Post of Sept 10th:—"There was a very happy gathering this morning at the residence of Mr. Byrro. Robinson, Glenelg, the occasion being the marriage of Miss Minnie, eldest daughter of Mr. Robinson, to Mr. S. V. Lowey, of Deseronto, book-keeper for the Rathbun Co. of that town. The ceremony took place at 9 a.m., in the presence of immediate friends of the contracting parties, and was performed by the Rev. S. J. Shorey, pastor of the Cambridge St. Methodist church—an old friend of the family. The bride was dressed in cream serge, trimmed with point lace and natural flowers and looked very charming indeed.

A Unanimous Call.

The Napanee Presbyterian church has extended a unanimous call to the Rev. W. W. Peck, of Kingston. The Presbyterians are fortunate in securing such an able preacher, and we predict that his labors here will be attended with marked success.

Grain Wanted.

I want 30,000 bushels of Barley, 20,000 bushels of Peas, 10,000 bushels of Rye, and a few Oats for which I will pay the highest prices. I will also pay the highest price for Timothy and Clover seed delivered here. Bring samples and get my prices before selling.

Give your full attention, never allowing your eyes to suffer neglect. Remember you can have them examined free of charge by H.E. Smith at Smith & Bros., Napanee, the only optician in this county. He has met with unparalleled success and can show numerous testimonials. Always look to the qualifications of those in whose hands you place yourself, as your eyes are most precious. You can procure artificial teeth or limbs but an artificial eye is useless. Remember the old firm.

F. W. Smith & Bros., Napanee.

The Grim Reaper.

Miss Beatrice Viola Woodcock, aged 18 years, and 6 days, passed quietly away at her father's residence, South Napanee, on Monday. Deceased contracted a cold about a year and a half ago which developed into bronchial catarrh, and her death though regretted, was not unexpected. She bore her illness with christian fortitude and died with a prayer on her lips. She was the only daughter of Mr. J. Woodcock, and a sister of Messrs Wm. and Philip Woodcock. Deceased was much esteemed for her many good qualities, and the family will have the sympathy of all in their bereavement. The funeral took place yesterday to the Western cemetery and was well attended.

Died in Youth.

It is with feelings of deep regret that we are called upon to chronicle the demise of Miss Florence Harris, which sad event occurred at her father's residence, Picton on Monday, 9th inst. Deceased held a position as ladies' maid on the steamer Deseronto and was well known and highly esteemed here. She was ill but two weeks, her death being attributed to acute pneumonia. Deceased was 21 years and 21 days of age and a remarkably fine looking woman. She was the daughter of Ezekiel Harris, of Picton, and a niece of Capt. Wm. Skillen, of the Deseronto. Quite a number from Napanee attended the funeral which took place to the Picton cemetery and was very largely attended.

Gone to His Reward.

On September 11th, 1895, at the family residence, township of Richmond, there passed away at the ripe old age of 77 years and 11 months William R. Sills, a man esteemed and respected by all for his probity of character and christian kindness. He was born in the township of South Fredericksburgh and was one of the landmarks of this district. He was a very successful farmer, having purchased the family homestead in Richmond township about twenty-five years ago, and by thrift and economy prospered at this occupation. Deceased was married in 1840 to Miss Lucy McCabe, of Hay Bay, and five children were the result of the union, four of whom survive to comfort the grief stricken widow in the declining years of her life. The children, Ibra B., Uriah, Erastus and Mrs. James Empey, of Switzerville, are held in high esteem and respect. Mrs. Michael Pringle, the eldest daughter, preceded her father to the grave about ten years ago. Mr. Sills served as a volunteer in the rebellion of 1837. He was a member of the Methodist church, and a christian who both by precept and example was a living witness to the saving powers of Christ Jesus. Deceased was a staunch Reformer and during his life did yeoman service for the Liberal cause. His funeral took place on the 13th inst. to the Napanee Cemetery and was largely attended.

IN MEMORIAM.

who was also prettily dressed in white serge. The groom was assisted by his brother, Mr. Edgar Lowey, of Deseronto. After the ceremony an appetizing breakfast was partaken of, and the time passed very pleasantly until the hour of departure to the train, which conveyed the happy pair east-ward to attend the wedding of Miss Lowey, sister of the groom; when the two couples will enjoy their wedding trip together, visiting Toronto, Niagara Falls and several western points. The presents were numerous and very handsome.

A Nocturnal Visitor.

Thursday of last week the residence of Mr. J. Lucas, confectioner, was burglarized. It appears that the robber effected an entrance into the house before the family retired. The family live above the store, and while Mrs. Lucas was upstairs putting her little daughter Gladis to bed she heard a slight noise, but thought nothing of it at the time. After the child had fallen asleep Mrs. Lucas descended to the shop and assisted her husband to make up the cash. Shortly afterwards they retired for the night. About one o'clock Mrs. Lucas was awakened by footsteps and to her horror discovered a man in the room. She awoke Mr. Lucas and jumped out of bed. The man, as soon as discovered, tried to grab Mr. Lucas but he caught little Gladis instead. In hunting around in the dark for something to defend himself with Mr. Lucas ran up against the burglar. The fellow evidently thought it was getting too hot for him and made for the door. Mrs. Lucas was partly downstairs when the robber made his appearance and commanded her to halt, but right lent swift ness and she sped out on the street and raised an alarm, but before any one arrived the burglar had escaped. He obtained a purse belonging to Mrs. Lucas' sister which contained a small amount of money, but not before he had gone through all the bureau drawers in the house and scattered their contents on the floor.

Harvest Home at Selby.

DEAR EXPRESS.—Permit me through your valuable paper to give an account of a most enjoyable time had at Selby on the 4th inst. The occasion was that of the annual Harvest Home Dinner, inaugurated by the pastor two years ago in the interest of the new parsonage then being erected. Through the labors and direction of the Rev. F. B. Stratton, it will be remembered this praiseworthy object was begun, and we were all pleased and surprised to find so much had been accomplished when we heard the report. Well, this Harvest Dinner, as both the others, was a magnificent success. The day was beautiful, the tables were just elegantly laden, and the people did enjoy unloading them once more in the shade of the orchard grove. When ample justice had been done, the crowd repaired to the church. The chair was occupied by Uriah Wilson M. P., and a programme rendered good enough for any people or place in this land. After singing Rev. R. McCulloch led in prayer. Then followed the chairman's address, and your readers know he is good at that. The report was next read by the pastor showing the amount raised, and from what sources, in the past two years. Total in cash and subscriptions yet due $1274, by socials and concerts about $100, excursions $280 and dinners, including the present one, about $300. At the close of the report a most flattering and commendatory resolution was moved and ably spoken to by Henry Wilson, Esq., eulogizing and thanking Rev. Mr. Stratton for the interest he has taken in raising the funds and aiding in this enterprise as he has. "But for his efforts the work would not have been done. 'Mr. Stratton is just the man to raise funds to build on pay debts—the right man in the right place as also in the pulpit.' The motion was seconded and carried enthusiastically. The Rev. gentleman briefly acknowledged the compliment. The programme then proceeded. Able addresses were given by Revs. I. R. Batter, of Roblin, R. Atkinson, incumbent of St. John's, Selby, W. G. Clarke, B. A., Yarker, and R. McCulloch, of Newburgh. They were all first-class, nothing to detract from the social or religious life. The music was good, the choir rendering several anthems, a duet, by Miss Nettie Stratton and Mrs. J. C. Higgins, and last though not least two admirable solos rendered with fine effect by Rev. Mr. Clarke. Something over a hundred then sat down to a fine open tea and the proceedings of the day closed with everybody well pleased.

ONE WHO WAS PRESENT.

Sept. 6th, '95.

In the year of our Lord ninety five.

On the eleventh day of September, Father's afflictions were over.
That parting we long will remember,
Dear father has gone to his rest.
He will suffer no more;
To remove him from earth God thought best
To a home on that ever green shore.
He has said to his children farewell,
He has took from their lips his last kiss,
Gone home with his saviour to dwell.
Dear father we don't you will miss.
His work for the Master was done,
He was ready when called for to go,
A crowd of bright glory has won
And a robe that is white as the snow,
Father now in his garment of white,
Walks the street with that glorified throng,
In the rapture of glory delight
With the glorified sing the new song.
With us he could no longer stay,
His body was borne from our door,
Angels bright did his spirit convey
When his last kiss no more.
Dear father, bound close to our heart,
As the ivy that clings to the oak,
But Jesus thought best we should part
The cord that once bound us is broke,
As we stood by the side of his casket
And gazed on his marble white brow,
Wish him back no more, never could ask,
For he is far happier now.
It was hard to bid father good-by,
And to bury him out of our sight;
God took him, we cannot tell why,
But we know what he does must be right.
Children dear I must bid you farewell,
Let me take from your lips a last kiss,
I am going with Jesus to dwell,
Your father you often will miss.
Remember you have one more tie,
To draw you from this world of care,
May we be again by and by.
In a home of the blest over there,
Dear wife and children you will not forget
When I am laid under the sod,
Though lonely yet you do not fret,
For Father's home now is with God.

Their First Home Game.

A large and interested crowd of spectators congregated at the grounds of the Scarlet Foot Ball club of Nananee, on Friday, Sept 6th, to witness the battle for supremacy between the home team and the Glenora foot ball club. It was a battle royal, and those who witnessed it were loud in their praise of the scientific exposition of the game. Additional interest was attached to this match from the fact that this was the Scarlets' first home game and that the previous match with Glenora had ended in a draw. The visitors brought down the best team procurable, among them being the noted goal keeper, E. Kingston, of Picton, better known to the foot ball fraternity as "Joe Beef." The Glenora boys are a fine, strong, athletic looking aggregation and they landed in Nananee fully determined to win. About half past three o'clock p. m. the teams lined up as follows: Nananee, goal, E. Hayes; backs, F. Scott, W. Ashley; half backs, A. Preston, W. B. Haines, and W. Carson; forwards, F. Grieve, P. Wagar, W. Exley, P. Preston, C. Fox. Glenora, goal, E. Kingston; backs, R. Fornari, H. Littler; half backs, E. Hopkins, C. McGillivray and F. Watson; forwards, T. Green, J. Green, T. Craven, W. Green and E. Powers. From the start to the finish the superiority of the Scarlets was apparent. Their combination work was almost faultless, while the Glen men were sadly deficient in this respect. Where ever the ball went there always appeared to be two Scarlet men to play it. The individual play of some of the Glenora team was good, but the trouble with them was too much individual play. The work of their defence was excellent, and it may be incidentally mentioned that they had lots of it to do, as Glenora was forced to play largely on the defensive throughout the game. Nananee's first goal was scored after a pretty exhibition of passing in front of goal, the ball being shot through by W. Exley, materially assisted by Porter Preston charging and knocking down the goal keeper. Shortly before half time a second goal was scored by W. Exley. There was but one goal scored in the second half, it being put through for the Scarlets by Porter Preston. Glenora tried hard to score in the second half, but they only succeeded in getting one shot on the Scarlet's goal, and that one was cleverly stopped by the goal keeper, and the result stood 3 to 0 in the Scarlets favor. The game throughout was swift, and Nananee has reason to congratulate herself on having such a crack team. The forwards and the half backs played a perfect game. The merits of the backs were not called into question as they had very little to do, but we are safe in saying that they will be found fully competent to fill their part of the bill should the occasion demand it. The game throughout was characterized by the utmost good feeling. Mr. O. Gilbert, of Picton, acted as referee and his fair and impartial decisions gave universal satisfaction.

Mr. Rhynard Yerec, of Picton, a retired farmer dropped dead on Wednesday.

WE'VE GOT ANOTHER SNAP IN CLOTHING

Some 42

Tweed Suits for Men

An odd lot, some sizes wanting, but the retail price was $8. We don't make much money on them at but you do, and you can't help advertising us.

For Big Heads

And Little Heads

only, a lot of Hats. Not hats ten years old, but Hats that are right in everything but size. You would pay from $1.50 to $3 if that were right, as it is they are in our window at

for anyone they'll fit.

You have

Probably Heard

that we are making good Suits for men, to measure, at

NINE DOLLARS A SUIT

but if you haven't seen them you don't know much about a bargain. There are plenty yet, and the price is the same while they last.

Priestly's

Dress Goods.

We have placed in stock this week two cases Priestley's Black Dress Goods in the newest fall weaves, and with the color and finish that only Priestley's have. Ladies desiring something specially nice in fine black dress goods will find it in their production, and our prices for them very moderate.

Ladies' Mantles.

More Mantles by one-half than we ever had. Qualities and finishes that we've never ventured to buy before, because in former seasons they were too high-priced. Cheap enough now for any purse to buy both good style and good service, so good that in past years you would not dream of getting them for less than twice the money. Coverts, Friezes, Cheviots, Beavers, Golf Cloths, in large variety, and with all the latest fads of cut and finish--

$4 to $12

New Carpets.

Our full Fall Stock. Brussels, Axminsters, Tapestries, Wools and Unions. Also Floor Oilcloths and Rugs. A stock big enough to include all the best of the new designs, and cheap enough to compete with Toronto carpet houses right along. If you are thinking of a carpet values have never been better than now.

Chenille Curtains.

and the price is the same while they last.

Twenty Cents

a Yard

is rather a taking price for Wool Tweeds, heavy enough for boy's fall wear, and sound quality. We've a lot of good patterns at that price, just in.

Men's

Ulster Coats.

A shade early yet perhaps; but it is the season of quick changes, and they might persuade you to buy your Ulster early. Our's are ready to show you, and we have

The best Ulsters for the Money in Canada

BAR NONE

It is worth your while to investigate. We think above statement is correct.

Overcoats

The shorter ones. We offer them at less than the makers would take for them to-day. Good Overcoats at $3.15, $4.00, and $4.50. Boys' ditto at $2.90.

Are staple goods with us. The fact that we sell a handsome curtain in all the popular colors at $2.75 may explain it. It is a good-sized curtain too, but not a bit cheaper than the ones we show at 3.50, 5.00, 6.00, and 7.500.

Flannelettes.

We believe we have the largest stock of Flannelettes held by any one house between Montreal and Toronto. But we can sell them. Large cash buying means cheap buying, and, in our case, cheap selling, see if it doesn't.

We want to Remind You

of a table of half-price dress remnants we filled last week. There are always customers who complain that they didn't hear of the bargains till their neighbors shewed them, and then were too late. These remnants are EXACTLY HALF the original price.

Quarter-price Wraps

for children only, odd ones. Do you know that we can sell you a little girl's ulster for 25 cents, and some that were $5 are now 1.25 1.50.

Nineteen Cents

For any of our best wool challies, light or dark.

Church of S. Mary Magdalene.

Sunday, Sept. 22nd, XV after Trinity, services as follows in S. Mary Magdalene's church, Napanee: Matins and Holy Communion 11 a.m.; Evensong 7 p.m.; Bible classes and Sunday School at 8 p.m.

Hawley Mission.

Sunday next, Sept. 22nd, will be observed in the Hawley Mission as a Harvest Thanksgiving. The school house will be tastefully decorated and a special harvest sermon will be preached by Rev. F. T. Dibb. There will be a celebration of the Holy Eucharist.

The annual Harvest Thanksgiving services will be held in St. Alban's church, Odessa, on Michaelmas Day, Sunday Sept. 29th. Matins and Holy Eucharist at 11 a.m., Choral Evensong at 7 p.m. The Rev. G. R. Beamish, M. A., of Kingston, was to have preached the sermon but, has been suddenly called elsewhere, so other arrangements will be made.

nection with St. Alban's church, Odessa will be held on Thursday, Sept. 26th. Supper will be served in Jubilee Hall at 6 p.m., followed by a choice concert. A large number of young people from Napanee have expressed their intention of going down to it. Among those who have consented to take part in the concert are Misses Herring, Coxall, and Hall and Messrs Jewell, Rockwell and Maybee. A thoroughly good time may be anticipated. Tickets for supper and concert only 25c.

Dismissed.

The charge of indecent assault preferred against Ed. Shorey and Wm. Moore, of Newburgh, by Miss Ida Kellar, was dismissed by Police Magistrate Daly on Wednesday.

The Ladies' Hotel.

The Ladies' Guild of the Church of S. Mary Magdalene have rented the Briscoe House for Wednesday of the County Show, and will be at home to all who desire a good meal or any kind of temperate refreshments. Pretty and attentive waiters, excellent meals, served up to the Queen's taste have always been the characteristic features of the affairs managed by the Ladies' Guild in the past, and we are sure that in their hotel venture they will eclipse all previous efforts. They are assured of the patronage of the men at least, and we are confident that their enterprise will

Accepted the Call.

The Rev. W. W. Peck has accepted the call of the Presbyterian church of Napanee, and his ordination and induction to the church will occur in October. At the meeting of the Kingston Presbytery held on Tuesday it was decided that Rev. S. Houston preach at Napanee next Sunday and Rev. Mr. Macdonald the Sunday following. Rev. Mr. Houston will read the edict next Sunday and Rev. Mr. Macdonald will serve the edict for ordination and induction the Sunday following. The ordination of Mr. Peck will occur on the first Thursday in October. Rev. Mr. McTavish will preach the sermon, Rev. Mr. Macgillivray will address the preacher and Rev. John Mackie the people. The Rev. Mr. McDonald and Mr. Doree were present from Napanee to advocate the presentation of the call to Mr. Peck.

Odessa and Yarker base ball clubs played a match on Thursday at the Central Fair, in Kingston for $25. Score stood, Odessa 14, Yarker 17.
